Brief Report

Bhoomithra sena club of the college of applied science, Vattamkulam, Malappuram, celebrated world environment day on June 5 with a series of co-friendly initiatives aimed at fostering environmental awareness among students and faculty members. The event featured an Eco-friendly Art project competition, where students, creatively expressed their thoughts on environmental conservation through various artistic mediums. A short film titled nature, created BMC volunteers, was also screened, highlighting the importance of biodiversity preservation and sustainable living. Additionally, an awareness session was conducted by Vivek Mohan from Mc2, providing valuable insights into pressing environmental issues and practical conservation strategies that individuals can adopt in their daily lives. A significant highlight of the event was a tree plantation drive, where, where the college principal sri. Abdussammad planted a coconut sapling on the campus, symbolizing the institution’s dedication to a greener and more sustainable future. This initiative reinforced the importance of tree planting in combating climate change and preserving the environment. The event successfully engaged students and faculty in meaningful discussions and activities that underscored urgency of environmental protection. Through these efforts, the Bhoomithrasena club aimed to inspire long-term commitment towards sustainability and eco-conscious living among the college community. The celebration concluded on a positive note, with participants expressing their enthusiasm and commitment to continuing such initiatives in the future.
