Brief Report

On January 6, 2026, the members of Bhoomitrasena and the PG Department of Botany came together to create compost using spent mushroom substrate and dry leaves from the herbal garden, with soil as an inoculum. This activity was conducted as a practical component of the Value-Added Course on "Compost Making" offered by the Botany Department, specifically for the second-year students of the four-year undergraduate program. The initiative not only provided hands-on experience in composting but also addressed the management of mushroom farm waste, converting spent mushroom substrate into a valuable resource. This exercise exemplified the department's commitment to sustainable practices and waste management.
